Please have notes prepared in advance of your literature circle meetings. Use these questions to guide your note-making.

Discussion: What questions are you thinking about at the end of this reading? What are you wondering about? What is confusing or unclear?

Powerful passages: What sections of the text caught your attention? This could be something surprising, weird, or well said. Make a note of the page number and beginning words so you can read it to your group. Be sure to write why you chose it.

Connections: What personal events were you reminded of in this reading? Are there other books you have read that connect with this story? How?

Illustration: Make a simple picture or diagram that represents this reading to you. Remember that what's important is not your artistic ability—it's your ideas.
