

Planning Your Argument

Make your claim!

- 2.
- 3.

Show your data! List the key differences between the two options that have led to your claim.

Which is important because . . .

Now, you have to warrant your choice by explaining why the differences you noticed in the data are important to you. Think about each difference individually, but look for patterns in your reasoning. Is there a general "rule" that you could apply?

Now that you've done all that planning, put it all together in a short paragraph.
