Pet Peeves of Facebook

Something I can't stand in life is when I go on my Facebook and I check my news feed and some girls will post a picture of themselves (also known as a selfie) and put as <sup>(our)</sup> their caption, "I look so ugly . . ." I know that is just <sup>(our)</sup> their way of asking for attention. (Or, fishing for attention.) They know that people will comment saying, "Oh, you're not ugly, you're beautiful!" Which is what they want. Whenever I see <sup>(our)</sup> their posts I always think, "If you think you look so ugly, then why would you post it for the public to see!"

Another thing on Facebook that annoys me is when people post statuses every few seconds and they don't even have a reason for them. For example, they will post something like, "Eating at Olive Garden!" Then they add a bunch of hashtags and a <sup>(our)</sup> picture of their food, "#food, #yummy #Olive #Garden #hungry #delicious." Seeing this, all I think is, "#No one cares!" They're just wasting <sup>(our)</sup> their own precious time on these constant, worthless, statuses.
