

January 30

My Teacher's a Spy

My teacher's a spy, I know it! I also know ^(you are) you're wondering why but just read if you want to find out. I even once told her ^(you are) "You're bad at being a spy," and she walked away. I even saw her last night on the phone. She said the word spy so that proves she is one. If ^(you are) you're still thinking she's not, ^(you are) you're dumb. Don't even finish reading this if ^(you are) you're still not believing me. She even has a pencil that turns into a pen. Now that must have been given to her by the C.I.A., which stands for Central Intelligence Agency. Or could it be from the A.I.C. (C.I.A. backwards) Alaska Imports Cookies. Ya, that's it, she's trying to find out the secret formula for our Texas cookies. I am going to stop my teacher and save the world.

"Honey, it's time for nap time!"

^(you are) "5 minutes, Mom! You're so annoying sometimes, Mom."

OK, after nap time I will stop my teacher and save the world. Man, I'm a good detective.

—Asher Bar-Yadin
Grade 6