

May 2

I love playing soccer, but there ^(plural) are some ^(plural) things that make the games less than perfect experiences. ^(plural) All of the soccer games I play in ^(plural) are mostly in the afternoon. ^(plural) All of these ex-football coaches always ^(plural) have games early in the morning. ^(singular) One thing that really annoys me at the games ^(singular) is the behavior of some of the parents. It seems that ^(plural) all of the parents of this one team always ^(plural) scream and cheer unnecessarily and at inappropriate times. Every single ^(singular) one of my teammates ^(singular) says how annoying they are. ^(plural) All of my teammates ^(plural) are determined to win so ^(plural) they aren't mocked by the parents. Hopefully we won't play them this weekend because they are always in the same tournaments that we're in.

—Jonah Katzman
Grade 8