Archetypal Spaces for Learning

David Thornburg identified three archetypal spaces for learning—the campfire, the watering hole, and the cave (Davis & Kappler-Hewitt, 2013).

1. The campfire is a space where people gather together to learn from an expert or in a large group.
2. The watering hole is an informal space where peers can share information and discoveries.
3. The cave is a private space where an individual can think and reflect.

Consider your goals. What are your questions or prompts for supporting this protocol in your learning session?
