

At the Lake
by Sarah Anderson

Above her thick white hair, Birch leaves sun flicker,

The first time she taught me to break a twig for the smell, I carried it for days.

She always pins her hair up loosely. The lake water blinds us.

Source: "At the Lake" printed with permission of the author.